Information about the Ramblers' Association

The Ramblers' Association is a registered charity with three main aims:

- to protect footpaths and other rights of way and increase access to open country
- to defend outstanding landscapes
- to encourage people to walk in the countryside

It carries out these aims at a national level, through the employment of staff to run national campaigns, lobby MPs, etc, and generally organise the work of the Association, and at a local level through the activities of the voluntary workers in its Areas and Groups, who tackle problems on paths, both by reporting them to highway authorities and by carrying out practical work, such as stile building and waymarking. The Areas and Groups also have programmes of rambles and other events
